We have said all that we care to say about the little paragraph which appeared in the Dispatch some weeks ago on the subject of the debt of gratitude which the people of Virginia owe to Mr. Massey and the Big Four. We maintain the same thing now. The people of Virginia do owe them a debt of gratitude, and we trust and believe that that debt will be paid next November.

Governor KEMPER ran for Governor of worthily fills. What is the use of pretending to believe that Governor KEMPER either ran as an Administration candidate, or was ever even so much as suspected of having any sympathy with General GRANT or the Republican party? Abandon that untenable position, Mr. FULKERSON. You cannot hold it. The contests of this year involve the succession to the presidency. This is the real issue. General MAHONE and his followers declare for ARTHUR, the Stalwart Republican. Mr. Massey declares for the party of his people-the Democratic party. There is no place for any other party. Surely you must have learned ere now that there can be but two great parties in this country at one time. General Mahone's course shows that he has learned that lesson. He has a large backing. You have none, as you now stand.

Mr. FULKERSON has written to Judge MILLER, of Marion, Smyth county, a long letter, which has called forth this editorial. We reproduce elsewhere so much of it as defines his present status as a party-man.

Since the last State Convention I have differed from individual members of our party and the caucus of the last Legislature with reference to certain measures which I regarded inconsistent with the platform and principles of our party. Neither the individuals from whom I differed nor the caucus had the right to adopt political measures or policies not embraced in or contemplated by the party platform and to bind the party to adopt them. The caucus rule (out of which all our unfortunate family troubles have grown), the commisioners' sale bill, the judiciary bill, and Danville railroad bill, were never issues before the people, and were in no sense party measures, and about which individual members of the party did and had the right to think and act as to them seemed best, without making themselves liable to the charge of dislovalty to the party. The caucus is not the party. It can bind its own members who voluntarily go into it, but it cannot bind the party except in those political matters covered by the platform of the party, or acted upon by the people at the polls. Much confusion and trouble have arisen in our party by the assumption that individual members of our party, acting with or without the caucus, had the right to bind and control the party If we would have peace, harmony, and suc-cess, we must recognize the fact that the people rule, and that they only express their will through conventions or at the Drowned on a Pleasure Trip. Monday morning the Pickering Bay Club, numbering eighteen, started on their eighth annual pleasure trip to Nantucket on the schooner-yacht Buckalew. At halfpast 11 o'clock, when opposite Grubb's Landing, about twenty-five miles south of this city, Michael J. Downs, of 824 south Second street, the president of the Club. was accidentally drowned by falling be-tween the tugboat Boulton, which had the Buckalew in tow, and the yacht. It seems Mr. Downs and another of the party wer skylarking on the deck and Mr. Downs fell. and in attempting to recover he leaned upon the guard-rail, from which his hand silpped, and, losing his balance, pitched into the river. After sinking he rose to the surface, and as he was a strong swim-mer the party on board thought he would be able to keep up until rescued; but, notwithstanding that no time was lost in cutting the yawl loose and starting to the rescue, he threw up his hands and sank. His body has not been recovered. The Club has offered a reward of $50 for its recovery, and have hired two sloops to go down this morning to search for the body. The yacht is now anchored opposite Grubb's Landing, and will return to the city to-day, the cruise for this year being abandoned .- Philadelphia Times.
